Collaborative school-family relationships are not optional. They are the necessary root of providing a just education for all students.
—L. Juliana Urtubey, p. 40

Speakers of all languages and language varieties are equally capable of expressing complex thoughts and doing rigorous academic work. What is not equal is how those languages are viewed and valued in society.
—Caitlin G. Fine, Kimberly Strong, and Deborah Palmer, p. 58

I often hear my students confess that they feel somehow “less than” their native English-speaking or American-born peers.
—Jessica Lander, p. 24
