Parent-School Relationships is next month's theme. Bess Goodykoontz writes on the topic, "Parents Know What They Want for Their Children." E. T. McSwain discusses ways in which parents and teachers can work together for the optimum development of children.

Cooperative community surveys in Illinois are described by Van Miller. A parent and a principal in Baltimore tell about home-school cooperation in a junior high school. Marcia Everett sets forth a point of view in regard to the place of homework in the school's program. Elizabeth Brady considers the influence of family background on children's lives and development.

Three articles discuss promising practices in reporting to parents. Carl F. Brown describes cooperative parent-school activities in a rural area.

Other authors are: Edgar Fuller, Mary Beauchamp, Mrs. Ernest B. Hunter.
